Bravely enables school leaders and your teams to work with peer-leaders and skilled facilitators to tackle your highest-priority challenges - and do so in ways that build new operating norms aligned with the equitable, deeper learning that we envision for students.

WHAT?
- Creation of an in-school Bravely team that will prototype solutions for an identified change idea
- Monthly support through workshops and coaching towards implementation, capacity building, and change catalyzing of school/system redesign, through responsive school-based liberatory transformation teams.
- Coordination meetings with district representatives to ensure vision alignment
- Identification and deliberate work on research-based organizational conditions to catalyze change efforts

HOW?
- By addressing one or more high-priority challenges identified by each school -- but doing so in a different, more inclusive, more enabling way (exactly as deeper, powerful learning works so well for students). We call it liberatory transformation design.
  - Sample Priority Challenges
    - Reimagining your learning approaches to be more in alignment with your vision of student success
    - Building more culturally responsive project-based learning opportunities
    - Transforming Community and Family Partnerships for families furthest from opportunity

WHY?
- Schools are seeking to transform during a period of uncertainty, trauma, and instability. NGLC’s work with districts across the country has generated a set of change-catalyzing methods that work, because they help schools align their operating norms and cultures with their reimagined vision for learning. You can read more about NGLC’s research to help you imagine the possibilities within your district.

---

NGLC

www.Bravely.org (For more information on Bravely)

www.nextgenlearning.org (For more information on NGLC)